Kate Stafford to Direct 1922 Show On Saenger Stage

Nationally Known Expert Is Fourth Introduced Here Since 1929

MANY NEW DISHES

Lecture Will Demonstrate Each Recipe Offered—Admission Free

The Star's Fourth Annual Cooking School will begin Tuesday, March 15, at the Saenger theater.

Kate B. Stafford, nationally known culinary expert—the fourth to be introduced to housewives of this section by the newspaper since 1929—will direct the 1932 school.

The women of Southwest Arkansas will look forward to this year's event more than ever before. The Star's Cooking Schools have enjoyed an uninterrupted climb in public favor ever since their introduction three years ago, culminating in an attendance mark last year of nearly 2,500 for the five-day show.

Four Days This Year

In order to give Mrs. Stafford additional time in preparing the theater stage this year's school will begin on Tuesday instead of Monday, and run but four days—of five, closing as usual Friday afternoon.

Admission will be free at the Saenger. Arrangements have just been completed with E. W. Hecht, manager of the Saenger theater, to use Hope's splendid show-house. The stage will be cleaned each afternoon, and a model kitchen set up for Mrs. Stafford.

Those who attended the cooking schools of the past three seasons know the system that is followed by The Star. Mrs. Stafford will prepare a meal each afternoon in the model kitchen on the stage, explaining her recipe to the audience, and following it with an actual demonstration.

Food advertisers, and dealers in kitchen and other home conveniences and appliances will place articles on display in the lobby and on stages.

Expect Large Attendance

An average of better than 2,000 women visit The Star's Cooking School each year, and it is presumed that all records will be broken this year when economy, coupled with new ideas in preparing the family meals, is more to be desired than ever before.

Several Hope merchants who have participated in former schools have made inquiries to plans for 1932. The Star has had none but favorable reactions from local citizens and merchants on past performance of Cooking Schools, and it is with absolute confidence that the newspaper recommends Mrs. Stafford and the 1932 show to its subscribers and the public generally.

Liberal Jew New Supreme Justice

Cardozo, of New York State Bench, Democrat, Succeeds Holmes

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Benjamin Nathan Cardozo, chief justice of the New York State Court of Appeals, was appointed Monday by President Hoover to the United States Supreme Court vacancy caused by the retirement of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Cardozo was recommended strongly by various elements describing themselves as liberals.

He is a Jew and a Democrat. His confirmation by the senate is regarded as assured.

Cardozo has the backing of New York's two senators and such leaders as Borah, of Idaho.

President Hoover conferred with Republican Leader Watson, of the senate, and other administration leaders in the upper house, before making known his choice.

The appointment was applauded by a number of senators.

Oil Test at Delight Is Holding Interest

ARKADELPHIA, Ark.—More than 500 feet of black shale, called "The Mother of Oil," has been encountered to date in the Henderson-East oil test near Delight. The well has been sunk to a depth of nearly 1,800 feet. E. R. Henderson, who is financing the test, having already drilled two other wells in the Delight section, says that a good oil well in Arkansas now would be a real boon as there is no proportion law to hamper production as in Texas and other states.

Star Moves Into 212 So. Walnut

Newspaper Forced to Omit Monday Edition When Storm Interferes With Moving Operations Saturday Night—Production Resumed Tuesday Morning

The Star comes out to its subscribers today from the new plant at 212 South Walnut street.

The management's plans to make the change over the week-end without interrupting publication were smashed when a storm broke about 9 o'clock Saturday night, raining down the top of the department's heavy trucks. They got the press into the new building only a few minutes before Sunday night's cloudburst.

Arrangement of offices and plant at 212 South Walnut will prove more convenient for both the public and the newspaper's personnel. Offices are lodged in the front part of the building, 40 feet on the street and 25 feet deep, with a substantial wall separating the shop.

A lobby 7½ by 15 feet has been provided, with swinging gates giving access to the editorial, business, advertising and subscription departments. Swinging doors lead back on either side to the shop. The heat and fumes of the metal furnaces in the casting department have been eliminated by placing the furnaces in a separate compartment cut off from the rear of the shop by heavy doors.

The Star's new offices and shop are complete except for minor details. The remodeling was done by J. W. Booth, general contractor; painting by S. B. Anderson and Harrington & Co., Inc., was by J. L. Fritz; electrical work by E. N. Bacon & Sons; gas plumbing by Shiver Brothers; and in-

Hope-Willisville to Play Basketball

Junior District Tournament Scheduled Here Next Saturday

A basketball game of much interest to fans here is to be played at the local high school Tuesday afternoon and another Tuesday night between the Willisville team and the local quintet.

Willisville has an unusually strong team this season and the Hope team has been showing up good in games of the past few weeks.

The Boys' Junior tournament will be played here next Saturday and Saturday night. During this tournament there will be a game between the Prescott High school first team and the Hope first team. This game promises to be one among the best of the season.

Cardozo was recommended strongly by various elements describing themselves as liberals.

He is a Jew and a Democrat.

Legion Outpost Meeting Postponed

Several to Attend Victory Celebration at Hot Springs Sunday

J. L. Stringer, post commander of the Leslie Huddleston Post of the American Legion announces that the outpost meeting scheduled for Thursday night, February 18, has been postponed on account of the weather and road conditions.

There will be no meeting of the post on this date.

Sunday a number of legionnaires from here will attend a membership victory celebration at Hot Springs.

Delegates from every post in the state are expected to be in attendance there.

The local post needs only 33 more members to have a 100 per cent membership for the year, according to Mr. Stringer. Every effort possible will be made this week to secure these memberships, in order that Hope will be counted with the posts having 100 per cent memberships at the state meeting Sunday.

U. S. Will Appeal On Cannon Defeat

Government Again Moves Against Politically-Active Bishop

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The government notified the district of Columbia Supreme Court Monday that it would appeal last Saturday's decision which invalidated the corrupt practice indictment against Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist church, and Miss Ada L. Burroughs.

Bishop Cannon was indicted for his alleged failure to report Republican campaign contributions to his anti-Smith fund in the 1928 election when the churchman was endeavoring to defeat the New York governor and Democratic presidential nominee in Southern Democratic states.

Atkins Candidate For City Attorney

Declares He Has Served at Saving to City, Seeks Re-Election

W. S. Atkins, city attorney, announced Tuesday in the political column of The Star that he would be a candidate for re-election in the Democratic city primary February 23.

Mr. Atkins made the following campaign statement:

"Since April, 1931, I have held the office of city attorney. As to how well I have served in this capacity, I shall not assume the province of determining, but am willing for my record, and the other City Officials, with whom I have co-operated, to answer in this respect."

Compensation Not Increased

"The compensation of the city attorney from January 1, 1930, to March 31, 1931, inclusive (fifteen months), amounted to $95,000, plus the fees collected by him for prosecutions and convictions in the mayor's court, which amounted to a considerable sum. Therefore, the city is paying to me, as city attorney, $15.60 per month less than it paid to my predecessor during the fifteen months immediately preceding my election to said position. And this is true without taking into consideration the fees collected by my predecessor from prosecutions and convictions had in the mayor's court.

"Prior to the 1930 government census report Hope was a city of the second-class, and under the law governing such cities the council fixed the monthly salary of the city attorney at $25 per month, which was nothing more or less than a monthly retainer's fee for his work in an advisory way and drawing ordinances for the city, and the law permitted the council to pay him for any additional work performed by him for the city, and also, permitted him to collect the same fees for prosecutions and convictions in the mayor's court as is paid to the prosecuting attorney.

Law Governing First-Class Cities

"The law governing cities of the first-class (Section 7693 of Crawford and Moses' Digest of the Statutes of Arkansas) provides that the city council shall fix the salary of the city attorney, "and that he shall not in any instance receive any additional compensation." Therefore, regardless of the amount of work to be done the city attorney cannot receive more than the monthly salary fixed by the city council.

Candidate to Succeed Himself

"I am a candidate to succeed myself as city attorney, subject to the action of the Democratic primary to be held February 23, 1932. The city attorney does not have any voice in fixing the salaries and compensation to be paid to employees of the city, and has no authority whatever with respect to the executive management of the city, or any department of the city government.

"As a taxpayer, however, I wish to say that I favor only such compensation as is necessary to insure efficient service."

"I am a Democrat; have always voted the Democratic ticket, and have never run for office or solicited the vote of the people on anything other than the Democratic ticket. I will support the Democratic ticket, and have no objection to the paper supporting it.

"I am a member of the Methodist church, and have been a member of the First Christian church for many years.

"I am a member of the Lions Club, and have been a member for many years.

"I am a member of the Elks Club, and have been a member for many years.

"I am a member of the Moose Club, and have been a member for many years.

"I am a member of the American Legion, and have been a member for many years.

"I am a member of the Elks Lodge, and have been a member for many years.

Now go on with the story
CHAPTER XI

TROUBLES of the heart were by no means uncommon at Dreamland. Ellen had no idea that her misery was evident in her face or bearing, but the moment she entered the crowded, chattering dressing room, Little Tony spied it out. She came over to where Ellen was dressing.

"What's eating you?" she demanded in a tone that blended curiosity and sympathy.

"Nothing," Ellen replied spiritlessly, as she kicked off her street shoes.

"Meaning everything," the other hazarded shrewdly.

"Please don't, Tony."

After a long, searching look Tony disappeared into the ballroom. Ellen stepped into the chiffon dress, adjusted the curving little jacket and walked out of the dressing room.

She sat down at her table. One by one the other girls struggled to their positions. The orchestra tuned up, struck into the first dance of the evening. Business had begun at Dreamland. It was a dull evening. Ellen looked around in a kind of sickness. She felt listless and depressed, tired of herself, tired of life.

After a while she began tracing the patterns on the table cloth. The patterns traced by her restlessness became more definite.

"Larry," she scratched on the cloth and then Larry Harrowgate. After that slowly, slowly, "Mrs. Lawrence Harrowgate."

"Well, you're a fine one," said a familiar voice.

Ellen's heart gave a great leap. She looked up into Larry's half-sugary, half-laughing eyes.

"I waited for you all afternoon—that is, I really waited more than half an hour," he was saying reproachfully. "Why didn't you come?"

He dropped to the chair opposite. Ellen's breath came in quick, uneven spurts. Her heart hammered oddly. With trembling fingers she rubbed the cloth while he watched, a puzzled frown between his gray eyes.

"Why didn't you come?" he repeated.

"I went to a movie," she answered truthfully. "I didn't notice the time until it was too late."

Some offer to pay for the privilege. College graduates have offered to sign on as cooks. Girls have threatened to become stowaways on the ships. All in all, it is obvious that the windjammer has an appeal which the steamship cannot possibly rival.

Now all of this is a bit puzzling, for there is no question that the steady disappearance of the sailing vessel has made life a whole lot easier for sailors. The sailing ships were beautiful to look at, but life aboard was very often complete hell. The work was hard and the food was poor, dangers were many and living accommodations were frequently atrocious.

Discipline ranged all the way from merely strict to downright brutal. Read any of the books written by the sail-storytellers, from Dana down through Conrad to Done and Rosenberg, and you get a picture of a life that was almost unbelievably hard.

Now, after many centuries, that life has been largely relieved of its terrors. Steamship Jack is better paid, better housed, better fed and more decently treated than his predecessors ever were.

But the young men fall over themselves to get a taste of the hard old life and calmly ignore the pleasanter life of the steam-driven merchant marine!

The human race, evidently, does not mind hardship, danger and pain nearly as much as it likes to pretend.

An Interesting Experiment

One of the most interesting experiments of the year is being undertaken by a group of people in Pratt county, Kansas. These people have bought 100 bushels of wheat at a price of $1.25 a bushel—a long way above the market price, you will notice; and they have sent it to a milling company to be made into flour, after which a baker will turn it into bread which is to retail at the prevailing retail price.

How much will the organizers of this little stunt lose on each loaf of bread? Or will they, perchance, not lose anything at all? Will they even find it profitable to turn wheat into bread, at prevailing prices, when the wheat costs $1.25 a bushel?

The answers to those questions will be worth seeing.

"Why didn't you come?" he repeated.

"I've a date," Ellen answered in a voice which she hoped was careless enough.

"Really! With Steven Barclay?"

"Oh no—not him," Ellen laughed. She hesitated and said, "It's—it's with Larry. Now wait a minute before you fly into me. I didn't go to the tea, just simply didn't go. But he came to Dreamland last night and it's—well, it's all fixed up for this afternoon."

"Then you think he's not engaged at all?" Myra asked in a worried way.

"I don't know what to think," Ellen confessed. "But anyway I promised to go riding with him this afternoon."

HER cheeks were flushed and her eyes were shining. She looked for a moment an eager 17 instead of a tired 26.

"If I had to start all over again," she continued with unusual passion, "I'd have to love Bert and I—well, because I often think he's changed and isn't quite the same."

"It's always bit the same," declared Ellen loyally.

But Myra scarcely heard her. "Whether he's the same now doesn't matter. Nine years is a long time. But we had the grandest thing in the world together. We loved each other so much that nothing else mattered."

MYRA put down her coffee cup.

Her face was distressed and disappointed.

"But Ellen—"

"Now don't be silly and old-fashioned, Myra," Ellen interrupted.

"I'm going out in broad daylight with a man to whom I've been properly introduced. The fact that he's engaged to another girl isn't any of my business. That's his affair, not ours."

They went on eating in oppressive silence.

"Oh, Myra, can't you understand?" Ellen said suddenly. "I wanted to refuse. You haven't any idea how hard I tried. But all at once I just naturally heard myself accepting."

"Yes, I know how that is," Myra admitted in a troubled tone.

"Ellen," she began, flushing faintly. "I've been thinking a lot about you. And the more I've thought the more I know how wrong I was. I don't think Larry Harrowgate is good enough or honorable enough for you no matter what you say. But the reason I was so upset about him in the beginning was because I had so hoped that you and Steven Barclay—"

"Oh stop, Myra." But Myra went stubbornly on. "I was trying to rob you, honey, of the sweetest thing that can happen to any woman. Just because Bert and I—well, because I often think he's changed and isn't quite the same."

HER cheeks were flushed and her eyes were shining. She looked for a moment an eager 17 instead of a tired 26.

"If I had to start all over again," she continued with unusual passion, "I'd have to love Bert and I—in just the same way. I wouldn't change a thing. I wouldn't want to. I'll have that for always. Ellen, is that the way you feel about your Larry—that nothing else matters?"

"Yes," Ellen whispered.

"I'm sorry, Ellen, and I'm glad too," said Myra, half crying. "I'd hoped you didn't feel that way because I'm afraid that you're going to be hurt. But if you love him like that it doesn't matter if he hasn't a dime. It doesn't matter if he's engaged to a dozen other girls—anymore. You'll suffer afterwards, will not be too much to pay for that first part of it. I hope and pray that you'll be luckier than I."

"I thought," Ellen said easily, "that I might invite him here to supper. One of my omelets and maybe some of the jelly we put up last vacation."

"I'm afraid mother won't like that," said Myra doubtfully.

At that very moment Molly rapped imperiously on the bedroom door.

"Ellen, Ellen, are you awake?" she called. "Slip on a kimono and run downstairs. There's someone calling for you on Mrs. Olancy's phone."

"Oh help," said Ellen faintly, looking over at Myra. "It must be Mr. Barclay."
